SUNDAY SERMONS AND NEWS NOTES

BAPTIST.

Dr. Ray Palmer preached Sunday morning at the First Baptist church the second sermon in the series on the subject: "Is the Bible Inspired?" Text, Hebrews 4:12, "For the word of God is living and active and sharper than any two-edged sword, and piercing even to the dividing of soul and spirit, of both joints and marrow and quick to discern the thoughts and intents of the heart."

The speaker said in part: The Bible proves itself to be from God because of the picture it paints of sin.

Man's conception of sin, is that it is a disease or a physical weakness, a natural effervescence, an overflow of nature, a good thing, adapted to a wrong purpose, perhaps, or it is racial inheritance; or, they say, sin is not a reality, it is real only to the mortal mind.

All those conceptions of sin are diametrically opposite to God's conception of sin. The Bible regards sin as high treason, rebellion against the government of God. Sin is a movement whose final tendency would be to hurl God from his throne. The Bible hates sin; its very leaves curl and writhe as they burn with the holy fire of Jehovah's hatred for sin, so fearful are the Bible's denunciations of sin, that when the impatient sinner reads God's denunciations of sin he feels like slamming the holy book shut and fleeing to some dark corner of the universe, where he would hide from the blazing eye of Almighty God. The legend tells us that after Cain had murdered Abel, he fled with his family to a far-off country, but wherever he went, he could see the eye of God upon him. He took his family onto a point of land projecting into the sea, but above the rim of the ocean, he saw the eye of God. He cried: "Put me in a deep cave!" His family dug a deep place and put Cain therein, they built a roof of solid masonry above him, but Cain cried: "O I still see the fiery eye of God; it burns into my very soul!"

God's flaming eye looks out from the Bible upon every sinner, it sees hate, selfishness, deceit, lying, lust and murder, writhing and twisting like poison reptiles through the human soul. The Bible has no forgiveness for sin until it has been fully punished. This Divine law finds an echo in all nature, for nature, also, never forgives, until the violator of law has been adequately punished. The Bible says to the sinner: "You must accept Jesus Christ as the only substitute or be lost." The Bible shows God's hatred for sin in Christ's death on the cross, for the moment God listen, would uninspired man have conceived this conception of sin? Never. Man looks upon sin lightly.

Even many church people go on for years practicing some polluting, filthy, degrading sin, while standing outside of the Kingdom of God practicing sin every day of their lives, they love it, they roll it as a sweet morsel, under their tongue.

The Bible's conception of sin and man's are as far apart as the poles; they could not, therefore, have come from a common author.

The Bible's conception of sin is a revelation from God.

METHODIST

Rev. Christian R. Carver of the Methodist Episcopal church preached Sunday morning from the following theme: "On the Threshold." Using for his text the following taken from the eighty-fourth Psalm: "For a day in Thy courts is better than a thousand; I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." Literally interpreted our text means just this: "I would rather lie on the threshold, rather fill the lowest place and execute the meanest office in God's house than be the greatest and happiest of those found elsewhere. We sometimes say: 'I have only a little religion, but I would not part with it for all the world.' This is substantially what David says in our text."

The doorkeeper represents the least glorious and the least powerful member of the congregation but even he is more influential than the richest and the greatest of the children of ungodliness. The ultimate power in the universe is the power of righteous mind, the power of righteous character; and he who possesses these in the most modest degree is mysteriously noble and efficient. Worldly men act at the outer circle of things, whilst the spiritual man lives at the center where the secret springs are found. The most inferior human being possessing intelligence and language, is greater than the highest animal that has not developed beyond the brute force and instinct. The very doorkeeper belongs to a higher order of things.

The doorkeeper represents the least gifted of the children of spiritual wisdom. The scribe is instructed in the law, the priest's lips keep knowledge, the prophet has the light, but the doorkeeper on the threshold catches only the dying gleams of the altar, the dying whispers of the oracle. Yet David holds that the knowledge of the spiritual man, even when possessed in an inferior degree, is precious beyond rubies. Let us put intellectual gifts very high; but the greatest intellectual prince that knows not God and all that God means is less than the least of those who know God and love him.

Communism with God, however faint, faith in promises, however feeble, a sense of infinite truth and love, however dull, and a glimpse of heaven, however dim, give us a satisfaction beyond all gratification of time and sense. The most brief life of goodness is better than the longest life of wickedness. "One day in Thy courts is better than a thousand" elsewhere. When Lizio, an Italian was told of the death of his dissipated son, he replied: "It was no news to me; he never was alive." A life destitute of the spiritual element is not truly a life at all. To live is to feel the spirit in contact with God, to be filled with His light, to be thrilled with His love, to be warmed with His love and to be satisfied with His likeness.

We stand on the threshold of another year. Let us truly live this year, putting first things first. Men are proud to attain high honor in secular life. Let us be proud to serve in the church. Any office in the church of God, ought to be greatly esteemed.

"Only to stand on the threshold, Ah, this were heaven to me, After the dreary desert, After the wintry sea; But I hear Him call me higher, In accents low and sweet— I shall not stand on the threshold But sit at the Master's feet."

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

Following the custom of past years the last Sabbath services of the year in the First Presbyterian church were services of praise. In speaking of the messages of the past year, Rev. Carver said, in part: "Once it was thought that the service that God desired most was the withdrawing from the world and living in denial of all that means most to worldly associations. Now we look upon activity in the performance of daily tasks done in good spirit and faithful performance as sincerest service to our Maker and praise that is acceptable unto Him."

"Every mason in the quarry, Every builder on the shore, Every woodman in the forest, Every boatsman at the oar; Hewing wood and drawing water, Splitting stones and clearing sod; All the dusty ranks of labor In the regiment of God— March together toward the temple, Do the tasks His hands prepare. Honest toil is holy service, Faithful work is praise and prayer."

"The year that is closing has brought to each of us many little deeds that our time and strength could do and one of the very first thoughts of praise unto God should be reverent thankfulness for opportunity and strength for service to God, to country and to our fellow men. That day will be your darkest and longest and most hopeless of your life when you have neither strength nor opportunity of real honest needed work."

"They tell us that in each cubic foot of air there are potentially one thousand pounds of power; and that the coming discovery will be the method of unlocking the latent force in the atmosphere and transforming it into light, heat and power. No one has ever yet attempted to estimate the unlocked powers of one whole hearted life that is devoted to any worthy cause. The Wright brothers, Thomas A. Edison—on, there are a hundred names that tell of what attempts man has made in the seemingly impossible and yet won. One of the best days of your past year was that day when you had to do that which was seemingly too big and great for your talent and strength. That was a day that lifted you to the greater man or woman. One of the causes for

CORINNE GRIFFITH
VITAGRAPH STAR

It was particularly appropriate that Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, should have selected Corinne Griffith for the leading role in Clyde Fitch's "The Climbers," which recently has been completed. That is what Miss Griffith has been doing since she left her home in Texas, where she might have been born in any one of three states. She has been climbing ever since, until she is on the top rung of motion picture success. Beginning her career with Vitagraph, she has continued with the pioneer in the picture field, achieving one success after another. Some of her most recent features have been "The Unknown Quantity," "Thin Ice," "A Girl at Bay," "The Brimble Bush" and "The Tower of Jewels." In addition to her unusual personal appearance and histrionic talent, Miss Griffith has the happy faculty of wearing beautiful and unusual gowns with grace and has had a splendid athletic training.

praise today is that this past year has summoned us all to larger tasks and more critical problems. The boy who never has a problem in arithmetic that he cannot solve with ease never climbs the summit of mathematics, and the year that only offers you little tasks does not develop you to the full."

MEXICAN REBELS PLAN TO SET UP GOVERNMENT

EL PASO, Tex., Dec. 29. — Mexican revolutionists are working on a plan for unity of military commands and aims with the first step the setting up of a de facto government, according to well defined reports reaching here today.

Followers of Francisco Villa said he had been agreed upon as the military leader by revolutionists on the east coast of Mexico and by southern rebels. The revolutionists, it was said, plan their first military movement on the east coast, and their chief aim at present is to obtain control of the Mexican oil districts, where they would set up their de facto government. General Manuel Palacios, who has control of the district outside what Carranza holds, has not yet agreed to the proposal of the other revolutionists, but a said to have expressed willingness to consider it.

The revolutionists are said to have decided that the government they would set up would have greatest opportunity for success and recognition by foreign governments if they could take the oil districts, put their government into operation, give guarantees and protection to foreigners and foreign interests and cut the Carranza government off from a source of great revenue and dispute. The revolutionists also would have ports through which contract with the outside world could be obtained.

The plan further calls for the seizure of the east coast of Mexico by the revolutionists as rapidly as possible.

WORKING ON THE TREATY

Plan Compromise That May Bring Two Thirds Vote

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29. — Republican and Democratic senators working for a peace treaty compromise centered their attention today on a plan said to have been accepted by the mild reservation Republicans and by a number of demands for ratification with three modifications in the fourteen reservations approved by the senate majority at the last session.

The three changes, which some senators believe would make the reservations acceptable to two-thirds, deal with the preamble declaration that the qualifications must be acquired in by the other powers, with Article Ten and with Shantung. The mild group believe that Senator Lodge, the Republican leader, will be willing to make these changes and that Senator Hitchcock, leader of the Democrats, also will be satisfied with them. It was said, however, that neither of the party heads in the senate had yet expressed a final opinion.

Under the new preamble suggested, the senate reservations would be regarded as accepted by the other parties to the treaty unless specific objection were made within a limited time. The wording of the Article Ten reservation would be changed so as to eliminate the language which President Wilson said he would regard as a rejection of the treaty and to substitute an affirmative declaration that the article's obligations are accepted with the understanding that future congresses shall be at liberty to decide questions of peace and war. Language which some senators have regarded as offensive to other powers would be modified in the Shantung reservation.

Although compromise talk on this and other modification plans continues among the senators remaining here there are so many absent that no concrete action is expected until the senate reassembles next Monday.

THE RESTING PLACE.

Oh, I have known the noisy town, and trampled its pavements up and down, The winds of trade have stung my face and blown me here and there; I've stood and talked with men who seek their golden idols week by week, And trampled on the gentler things and never stopped to care.

Oh, I have played the dreary game of fighting for a bit of fame, I've heard the cheering multitude and I have heard his jeers; I know how tired those great men are, of leaving home and traveling far, I know how much they miss the joys which come with humbler years.

I've thumbed and worn the book of life, I've learned the pages hot with strife, I've played the lad, and played the youth, I've laughed and loved and wept; I've turned from joys that I possessed to journey East or journey West.

And in the end I've always wished that what I'd lost I'd kept.

The Lord above has shielded me from much that might have come to be, Has let me wander far away and brought me safely back; But wherefore I've chanced to roam my soul has always yearned for home.

The flowers I sought have never bloomed along a railroad track, For neither fame nor yellow gold the fancy of a man can hold, They lure him for a little while, but soon he must return Unto the peace and calm and play abiding where his loved ones stay— The glory of the world is found where happy candles burn.

Authority On Mexico

Hon. Albert F. Fall.

This Republican statesman of New Mexico is serving his second term in the United States Senate. He is so intimately informed upon the Mexican situation that he has become the very center of the discussion of American relations with that turbulent republic. He has conducted an inquiry into Mexican affairs, and the facts he has compiled are of the most comprehensive and startling nature. Recently he offered a resolution to sever relations with Carranza.
